SPY VS. SPIDER

I'm 13 years old and I love your magazine. One day, as I was perusing the magazine rack at Kroger, I found the newest issue of MAD buried under a bunch of Reader's Digests. When I opened the magazine, a spider fell out and hit my shoe. Maybe you should start offering subscriptions to spiders — they seem to have taken an interest.

James Chung • Milan, MI

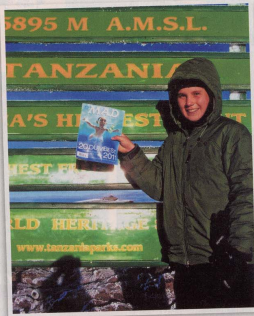

Chunga Din — You found a spider in your issue of MAD?!? That means you won MAD's "Find a Spider" Sweepstakes!!! It's like Willy Wonka's Golden Ticket — but instead of getting a tour of his fabulous chocolate factory, you get a spider on your shoe (while supplies last)! Congratulations! Now that the contest is over, please send the spider back. His name is Reggie and he is missed. —Ed.

NO CLIMB OR REASON

This December I climbed Mount Kilimanjaro in Tanzania, and of course I brought my MAD magazine! The peak is at 19,341 feet, so at that altitude your thinking begins to get a little fuzzy (like after you read MAD), but luckily I remembered to pull out my MAD magazine and snap a quick picture before we headed back down. As a loyal subscriber for three years and running, I hope you can publish this in an upcoming issue.

Oscar Leinbach • Minneapolis, MN

Outside Leinbacher — That sounds like a grueling journey — but at least you were prepared! Every mountaineering manual we've ever read (and we've read them ALL) says that you shouldn't scale one of the world's highest peaks without packing the latest issue of MAD! We hope you didn't need any of the oxygen, first aid supplies or food that you took out to make room for the issue — but, on the other hand, that Spy vs. Spy article was pretty great, huh? —Ed.

THE MAKE A DUMB WISH FOUNDATION™

I love your MAD magazine, so please enjoy my robot Alfred E. Neuman (Albot). I would like to propose this would make a fantastic cover or at least appear in the magazine. Thank you for your consideration.

Clark McDowell • Augusta, GA

Transformers: Clark of the Moon — At the Make a Dumb Wish Foundation™, we strive to make our readers' dumbest wishes come true. And with that in mind, we're granting BOTH of your requests — we're putting ALBOT on a cover IN the magazine! Isn't that great?!? Who knows what's next — Albot t-shirts and toys? Albot movies and cartoons? An Albot theme park?!?

The sky's the limit! (Incidentally, Albot is now a registered trademark of DC Entertainment — Albot and all Albot-related characters, likenesses and related indicia are trademarked in perpetuity. Thanks for the great idea! And if you ever decide to visit the new Albot-land in Columbus, OH, we can promise you a coupon for one free small soft drink...with purchase of a larger soft drink.) —Ed.

THE MISSING INK

I'm 13 years old and I love MAD! But you guys always seem to not give me my money's worth! In MAD #514, you conveniently left off the article "What if Herman Cain Became a Chiropractor?" In MAD #513, you left off "What If Universities Had a Jell-O Wrestling Major?" You did the same thing in MAD #512, 511, 510 and 509! Do you guys enjoy making me suffer? Or do you guys need to hire a new editor?

Jack Neary • Richmond, VA

Near-Beer — The answer to both of your questions is "Yes." However, your letter was a real wake-up call! And as a result, we've redoubled our editorial efforts and we're confident that MAD #514 is the last time you'll find an article "conveniently" left out! Just out of curiosity, though — do you enjoy making US suffer?!? Would it kill you to focus on all the articles we remembered to leave IN? Maybe try seeing the glass as half-full for a change! —Ed.

READER ALERT

Andrew Farago over at the Cartoon Art Museum in San Francisco, CA gave us the hot tip that on April 21, the museum will be hosting an exhibit dedicated to the art of MAD — featuring art from the 1950s all the way up to present day! The exhibit is running into September, so if you're going to be in the San Fran area, definitely check it out. And if you're NOT going to be in the area, start making plans to change that, you roustabout! You can find more info at cartoonart.org!

ALFRED LOOK-A-LIKE

Ever since my husband and nephew's pictures have been in Dirt Wheels magazine, my son Jonathan has been asking me to get his picture in a magazine. (He thinks it will make him famous.) I always thought he resembled Alfred, but something was missing. He needed a tooth missing, so me and my husband and my nephew held him down and ripped out one of his teeth. The only problem is, it's the wrong one! Whoops!

Melissa Streib •
High Ridge, MO

Me! Hath No Fury — What a horrifying and disturbing story! If we had a nickel for every time a family was torn apart by Dirt Wheels magazine, we'd be very rich indeed! On the other hand, your backwoods dentistry DID make Jonathan look a lot like Alfred...so, we guess it all evens out! —Ed.

THE QUOTABLE MAD

Sometimes — and it's a rarity, we know — people actually say nice things about us! Sure, they'd never have the cajones to say it to our faces, but they did post it on Twitter, which is good enough for us!

"A must-get issue. Amazing art—the attention to detail illustrating our sociological derailing of our beloved country!"
The Vampire Diaries' Ian Somerhalder about MAD #513

"2 year subscription to MAD MAGAZINE!
take that parents...& every girl that just said 'ew'"
Former WWE World Heavyweight Champion Dolph Ziggler

MISTAKE IT OR LEAVE IT

It shouldn't surprise anyone that we sometimes make mistakes. Let's be honest — we work for MAD — which means we've made a LOT of mistakes in our lives just to end up here. In this case, in our "Banana Republican" article from last issue we forgot to include photo credits for the images that Scott Bricher Photoshopped. We know...we goofed. You're angry at us...we're angry at ourselves (and, frankly, a little angry at you for being so angry at us!). But we just want to move past our frothing disappointment and try to rebuild, ok? Anyway, here goes:

THE BRICK AND THE DEAD

I just thought I should let you know, I am a huge fan of your magazine. I also happen to be a LEGO addict. One day I was just sitting around, doing nothing much, when my ingenious 12-year-old lump of grey matter put together an amazing plan: LEGO MAD! I decided on a vignette starring a Spy vs. Spy scene. I first built an 8 stud by 8 stud square with a red wall and a small table, and a simple but awesome floor inlay. The minifigs starring in my vignette sacrificed themselves to my Sharpie and Wite-Out, but there was a problem: how to do the pointy noses. My previously-mentioned lump of grey matter then had the idea to use small amounts of clay. I set up the minifigs and added some accessories to complete my masterpiece. If you can't tell, the White Spy has just opened a briefcase expecting top secret documents and found lit dynamite instead. Ouch! And of course you can't forget the Black Spy laughing from above. Hope you guys like it.

Oliver Ward • Peterborough, NH

Ward is Bond — Great job! You know, we also have a 12-year-old lump of grey matter. We found it in the back of our fridge. We think it used to be potato salad. But whatever it is, it's not dreaming up any Lego Spy adventures, that's for darn sure! —Ed.

EC DOES IT

I have a question to ask. When MAD was an EC comic, there was a comic like MAD called Panic. So why didn't Panic become a magazine, too?

Jacob (last name withheld) • Round Hill, VA

Jake the Money and Run — It did. You know it as Dirt Wheels! —Ed.

ENVELOPE OF THE MONTH

I've been a reader of your so-called magazine since I was about 8, but I've never written. I decided to draw you an envelope — I drew the envelope and did the black outline and my 10-year-old son, Allen III did the color, it's colorful to say the least!

Allen Vermillion • Duncan, OK

WE DON'T BELIEVE OUR YEARS

In a 1994 issue of MAD (#326), my first letter was printed; "Earl's Initial Inquiry." Now, over 17 years and 50 years of reading MAD later, my second letter appeared in 2011, in MAD #510; "Nobel Intentions." I believe your Archive Dept. will confirm this to be the record for most years between letters printed and warrants special recognition. Also, just so you will be looking for it, I plan on breaking the record by sending another letter in 18 years; probably posthumously.

Earl Holden • Zillah, WA

Gotta Know When to Holden — We're not sure about holding the record for "most years between letters" — after all, there are people who wrote letters to us in the '50s, and they could write again ANY MINUTE NOW and shatter your precious little streak! However, our crack "Archive Dept." did find a bunch of other records that you were successful in breaking — including "Most Pointless Letter by Someone Named Earl," "Most Awkward Request for Recognition," "Most Pitiful Solicitation for Acknowledgement" and "Least Exciting Use of Commas." So congrats! And thanks for the warning about another letter coming in another 18 years — we'll brace ourselves accordingly. If you're not dead by then, we'll certainly try to be! —Ed.
P.S. Thanks for writing!

READER ALERT

If your letter was printed in this issue, we know what you're thinking: "There's no way my life could get better than this!" Well, you'd be wrong! Because not only do you get the sense of pride and accomplishment of having your letter printed, you also get a whole bunch of awesome free gifts! You'll be receiving Regular Show: Slack Pack on DVD AND one of the two iPod Touch cases shown here, courtesy of our pals at Cartoon Network (available at cartoonnetworkshop.com); you'll also be getting Walt Disney's Donald Duck: Lost in the Andes, from our good chums at Fantagraphics Books; Maximum Road: The Iconic Covers of Thrasher Magazine from our pals at Universe Publishing; and last, but certainly not least, MAD Season 1, Part 2, from our amigos at Warner Home Video. Oh, what a world! What are you waiting for? Send us a letter and watch the riches roll in!

THE FAST FIVE PART DEUX WAYS THE POST OFFICE CAN RAISE & SAVE MONEY

- 1 Cut back on costly deliveries by simply rewriting the postal motto: "Rain, sleet and gloom of night will all stop our couriers from swift completion of their appointed rounds."
- 2 Establish a $5 "jump to the head of the line" service fee at post offices. (Higher fees during the holiday shipping rush.)
- 3 Institute a "sloppy handwriting surcharge." If the automated mail system can't decipher someone's chicken scrawl, it gets returned to sender for additional postal fees.
- 4 Allow mail carriers to moonlight for extra cash while working. Let the postman check on customers' pets while they're away and he's dropping off the mail.
- 5 Eliminate expensive pickups by relocating all corner mailboxes to a single corner in each city.

Terms of Service

FAQ

Should I take the time to read the new Google Privacy Policy and Terms of Service?

That depends. If you're an investigative journalist or civil liberties lawyer, then you should definitely not waste your time reading it. But if you're an everyday schmuck who'll get bored and confused by our legalese and rush back to HomeAloneInMomsWeddingDress.com after 15 seconds of befuddled scanning, then yes — by all means, read away!

What's different about the new Privacy Policy?

We've totally rewritten it to make it appear as benign and transparent as possible. If you'd like more information, you can click here. But understand that our new policy does allow us to closely monitor those who are looking to make trouble, and to take appropriate action when necessary.

What's different about the new Google Terms of Service?

For starters, we're actively promoting it to make it seem like we're not a monolithic corporate behemoth. And how are we doing that? By e-mailing EVERY PERSON ON EARTH!

What's staying the same with Google's approach to privacy?

We want you to know that we at Google remain absolutely committed to maintaining privacy — ours! Why do you think we don't bother posting our phone number and make it so difficult for you to contact us?

What choices do I have to control how my information is used?

It's easy to change your settings to indicate you'd like more control over your personal information. Go to Google.com and in the upper right-hand corner, click on "settings." Then go to "personal settings," then "privacy settings," then "update settings." Then answer each of our 115 profile questions, which should only take 75 minutes. At the end of the survey, click "Save." This will make your web browser freeze — causing you to curse, throw up your hands in disgust and leave your information snugly in our clutches.

Is Google collecting more information about me?

Absolutely not! Our previous policy was quite proficient in collecting everything possible there is to know about you, including your credit history, hat size, favorite kinks and the frequency of your bowel movements. We're just changing the way we warehouse this information so we can access it in a moment's notice and bombard you with dozens of ads every time you look at your computer screen. We've also created a fully searchable archive of all of your emails. (Speaking of which, who's this co-worker Sheryl you keep emailing with — does your wife know about her?)

What should I expect to see change as a result of this?

Nothing at all. The whole point is that you won't even notice the changes. Then we can quietly collect all your information and slowly take over the world. But in five years when your microwave won't let you heat up a burrito until you've watched a holographic trailer for The Expendables 4, maybe then you'll start to piece together how things started going wrong.

What if I don't want to use Google under the new Privacy Policy and Terms of Service?

Naturally, you're not REQUIRED to use Google. You're still able to use any search engine you like. We hear great things about Hotbot! Haha-haha! Or Askjeeves! Hahahahahaha! Or Lycos! Remember Lycos?!! HAHAAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA! Seriously, you could switch over to a different search engine...but the detailed psychological profile we've built of you indicates that you'd never do anything so ridiculous.

Under the new Privacy Policy and Terms of Service, will my private information in Google services remain private?

Probably not. Whatever. To be honest, we feel like we've humored your little privacy concerns long enough. And just so you know, Facebook is just going to escalate their efforts to own every shred of its users' personal information. So between us and them, by mid-2014, we'll know what everyone on earth looks like naked.

Will Google sell my personal information to third parties?

Of course not — that's soooooo Web 1.0! We prefer the term "barter." It's MUCH creepier this way. But rest assured, your data will remain closely guarded on our servers and available only to those Google partners who have paid us a fortune for this information. Also the U.S. government, the Russian Mafia and any high school hacker with a laptop, a router and an hour to kill.

How can I see what Google knows about me?

That's a stupid question. Google knows everything about you. It's what you don't know about Google that we're counting on to remain in business.

"I just finished a 72-hour work week at the iPhone factory and want to kill myself"

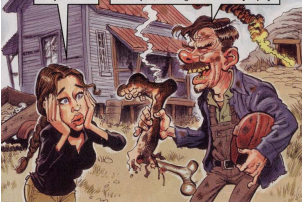

You speak. Siri helps. Even though it's one of the reasons you want to kill yourself.

iPhone 4 S

Oh no! I'd recognize Papa's femur anywhere!

The bad news is that your father was killed today in the mines. But the good news is that he got snuffed at 12:01 pm, so he gets half a day's pay!

I'll carve the dead rat. White meat or dark?

None for me. I'll just eat my bowl of soot.

Why does hers have maggots in it?

Because today is her birthday!

Being out here in the deep green woods, alone, is the only restful part of my existence. These quiet moments are the only time I can feel tranquil and completely at peace. Ha! Wham! I nailed that sumbitch right in the eyeball!

It'd be more impressive if the animals in District 12 didn't just stand in place. They don't have any more reason to go on living than we do!

For those of you who get chosen, think of these games as a scratch-off lottery! Except we'll be scratching your names off the census list! But stand tall! Should you be killed, a street will be named after you. If this district ever gets a street, that is. And now, the first selection is...Prune Aspercreme!

No! I volunteer to replace my little sister! She's so small and weak, she'd never survive the battle. In fact, it's less than 50/50 she makes it out of this ceremony!

Feel our confidence, and use it to give you strength. We know that you'll win! We know that you'll come back to us!

Oh, we've already rented out your room!

Who's he?

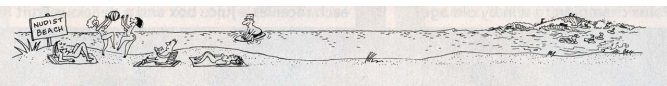

It's my responsibility to line up sponsorships for the both of you, and I think I've done a good job! I've wrangled exclusive deals for wreaths, body bags, and organ and tissue donation!

As your mentor, I'm supposed to give you valuable advice. So here goes: stay alive. Also, don't die. Try not to get killed. Make sure you survive. And if you feel your heart stop beating, don't do it!

You need to be well-groomed, charming, and likeable. You're still dead meat no matter what, but it'll make your "In Memoriam" montage must-see TV!

MY district trains year-round for this event! Fighting, stabbing, choking, clubbing! In the last ten years, we've lost just 16 kids to the Hunger Pains. Plus another 750 to practice!

What fighting skills do I have? Well, I'm good at Photoshop. And origami. And I can do several of the voices from Family Guy!

The Hunger Pains are brutal and pitiless. But on the plus side, I doubt you'll be traumatized by them for more than a few seconds!

Boo-yah! Every shot a direct hit! With a bow and arrows, I might just stand a chance in this competition...assuming I get to fight this wooden dummy!

I've designed this dress especially for you. You can never go wrong with basic black!

Don't worry. If you wear this over your bare skin, you'll come out basic black! Now, your total makeover! You have just two small "problem areas." Your body and your head! I'm going to trim your eyebrows. I'm going to shave your legs. I'm going to remove your arm hair.

But that's a colorful flame outfit

Will that give me

Who knows? I just like collecting hair!

Those sick freaks! All of them cheering, as I stand here, apparently engulfed in flames! What is this, NASCAR?

I'd feel better about being on this platter if I weren't surrounded by steamed vegetables!

Where'd you learn to attack human beings without remorse, snatch up stuff, and run away?

At the mall, the day after Thanksgiving! Back home, I'm the terror of Black Friday!

The girl from District Seven just got one of her arms and both of her legs ripped off!

Oooh, lucky! That gives her three new weapons to beat people over the head with!

What guts! What incredible guts! Who knew that that little kid's stomach contained so much guts?

You were smart to join our alliance. Lucky for you we had a spot suddenly open up. Right after I murdered the last guy!

I'm not totally comfortable with a group of people who are going to knife me in the back at the first opportunity.

Yeah, that's why John Boehner hasn't stopped crying since he was forced to make nice with the Tea Party! But it's a good move for you. At least when you're slaughtered by us, it won't be by some total stranger!

Meatwad! THEM! I can't believe that he'd betray our 2-day friendship! Can't let them see me! I need to scout up this tree and act like a pine cone!

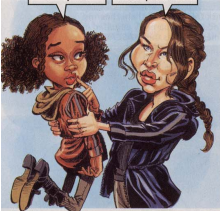

Eegaahhhh! Mutated wasps! Too many of their chemically-enhanced stings, and we're done for!

Yeah, but one spoonful of their honey and you can break Barry Bonds' all-time home run record!

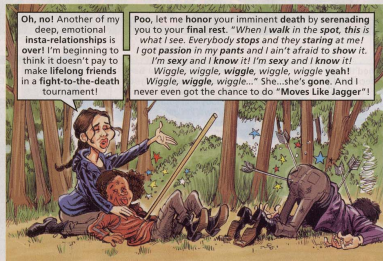

Partners? But... I'm so small. Are you really going to help me?

Help you? I'm going to WEAR you, as an arrow-proof vest!

Oh, no! Another of my deep, emotional insta-relationships is over! I'm beginning to think it doesn't pay to make lifelong friends in a fight-to-the-death tournament!

Poo, let me honor your imminent death by serenading you to your final rest. "When I walk in the spot, this is what I see. Everybody stops and they staring at me! I got passion in my pants and I ain't afraid to show it. I'm sexy and I know it! I'm sexy and I know it. Wiggle, wiggle, wiggle, wiggle, wiggle yeah! Wiggle, wiggle, wiggle..." She...she's gone. And I never even got the chance to do "Moves Like Jagger"!

Meatwad! You're alive! I'm so happy! Mmmm, num num num!

Does this mean you're starting to have feelings for me?

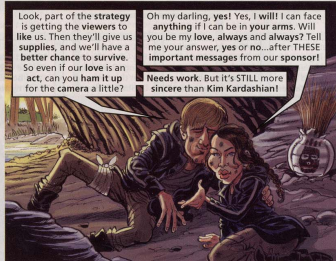

Vaguely! But you had a piece of stew on your upper lip!

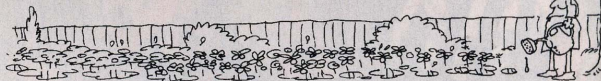

Look, part of the strategy is getting the viewers to like us. Then they'll give us supplies, and we'll have a better chance to survive. So even if our love is an act, can you ham it up for the camera a little?

Oh my darling, yes! Yes, I will! I can face anything if I can be in your arms. Will you be my love, always and always? Tell me your answer, yes or no...after THESE important messages from our sponsor!

Needs work. But it's STILL more sincere than Kim Kardashian!

to NOT like what I'm seeing on my TV screen. I want her dead by the end of the day. No excuses. Dead!

Wow, President Snarl is a stone cold customer.

He sure is. He's watching Dora the Explorer!

Out of my way! I'm grabbing those apples!

You can have them! On this devious man-made island filled with traps and tricks, nothing is what it seems! Apples equal grenades! Juicy berries are filled with acid! Fluffy bunnies are savage killing machines!

So in other words, that large, smoking metal barrel labeled "POISON"?

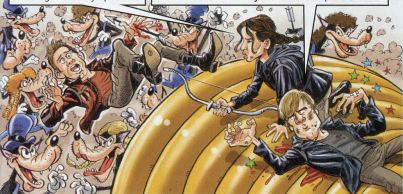

Exactly! Peach Snapple!

Look at their eyes! Inside, they're all the contestants who've died! They've been horribly brought back to life for a reality TV show, just like J-Lo's career! But we're safe as long as we stay up here!

Wait a minute! You mean the government is capable of extracting and reviving the life essences of the dead? And not only that, but they're scientifically capable of embedding those life essences into a pack of mutant metal hybrid attack wolves? But they never thought to build a robo-wolf that can shoot lasers...or fly...or climb a stupid tree?

Hear this! I refuse to kill her, and she won't kill me! Instead, we take these deadly poisoned berries together, to send an important message for all the kids out there! When all hope seems lost...give up!

Listen, you're in trouble! The Capitol isn't happy about having to declare two co-winners. Up until now, they've starved you, they've enslaved you, they've burned you, they've scarred you. But NOW, those dudes are pissed! It's no more Mr. Nice Dystopia!

Fail or Meatwad? Meatwad or Fail? I'm torn between two equally hunky romantic interests with limited acting range! But which one will I ultimately choose?

Meatwad Stretchmark, you've just won a lifetime supply of food, a fancy house, and a huge amount of money!

Mmmm, Meatwad's lookin' GOOD!

The audience must be shocked! Imagine, forcing a random group of strangers to fight for survival on a violent, mysterious island, constantly being watched, but in the end their drama dribbles to an unsatisfactory conclusion!

Eh. It's been done!

Between terrorizing the populace, frightening little kids, and eating whoever you want, being a monster usually seems like a pretty glamorous thing. But what's often forgotten is that as they get older, monsters have to cope with the same depressing issues as aging mortal coots. So pop an Ex-Lax, tighten your Depends, and prepare to be scared stiff by this horribly comprehensive list of...

Low-Quality Tools at Ridiculous Prices

HOW DO WE DO IT?

How does Hazard Fraught Tools sell low-quality merchandise to such a willing public? By convincing men that even though they don't need any of this stuff, owning it will make them feel more "manly." Seriously guys, how often are you going to use that reciprocating hydraulic miter clamp? Besides, why waste extra money on quality tools that you could someday hand down to your son or grandson? They won't care and neither will you, since you'll be dead. Save that money and buy something you can really use, like a large plastic jar — the kind you buy at Costco that's filled with stale pretzels — full of bungee cords (Aisle 6-A). Remember, it's always good to have seven dozen spare bungee cords around!

THE 50 WORST ABOUT THINGS AMERICA

WRITERS: CHARLIE KADAU, JEFF KRUSE AND SCOTT MAIKO

ARTISTS: TOM BUNK, PAUL COKER, HERMANN MEJIA, AND WARD SUTTON

THE 50 WORST THINGS ABOUT AMERICA

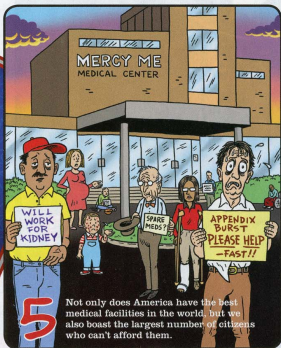

1 The growing number of Americans who now believe July 4th was the day our founding fathers gathered in Philadelphia to see who could eat as many hot dogs as possible.

2 The fact that no one has yet hired a helicopter to drop a steaming load of pig manure on the next Westboro Baptist Church military funeral protest.

3 Three words: The lack of math skills in our nation's schools.

4 Our national obsession with cosmetic surgery, which somehow equates "growing old gracefully" with paying to have someone give you a shiny, bloated ham face with humongous lips.

5 Not only does America have the best medical facilities in the world, but we also boast the largest number of citizens who can't afford them.

6 Prohibition. What the hell was America thinking? Also, slavery.

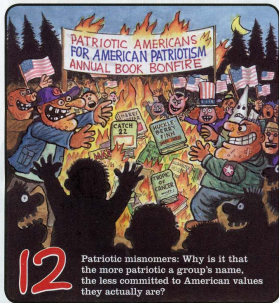

7 That we can find Saddam Hussein and Osama Bin Laden, but somehow, within the borders of our own country, Bigfoot still eludes justice.

8 Toothless, foam-hatted, Bud-guzzling, mullet-wearing, deer-shooting, cousin-rubbing, pickup-driving, trailer-living red state hicks who caricature all blue-staters as sushi-nibbling elites — without ever bothering to consider the more nuanced reality.

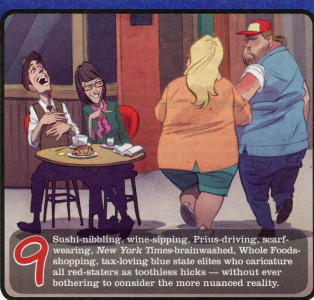

11 Hard-to-spell capital cities like Yeghegnadzor...wait, sorry, that's one of the 50 worst things about Armenia.

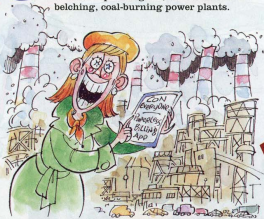

12 Patriotic misnomers: Why is it that the more patriotic a group's name, the less committed to American values they actually are?

13 Twice as many Dakotas as a modern industrial society really needs.

9 Sushi-nibbling, wine-sipping, Prius-driving, scarf-wearing, New York Times-brainwashed, Whole Foods-shopping, tax-loving blue state elites who caricature all red-staters as toothless hicks — without ever bothering to consider the more nuanced reality.

10 Electric companies that encourage you to protect the environment and "go green" by signing up for "paperless billing," while they continue operating old, outdated carbon-belching, coal-burning power plants.

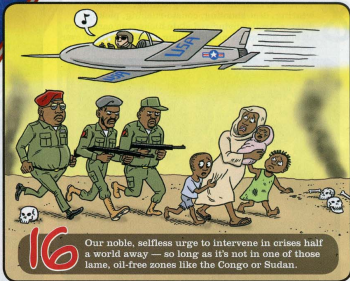

14 Our ridiculous immigration policy. Hard-working laborers get hassled trying to cross the border from the south, but Justin Bieber can just traipse right in from the north. In what universe is THAT fair?

15

Our national image of ourselves as tough, self-sufficient survivors — when in reality, if there's not enough foam in our Grande Mochaccinos, our day is so totally ruined!

16

Our noble, selfless urge to intervene in crises half a world away — so long as it's not in one of those lame, oil-free zones like the Congo or Sudan.

17

The two words guaranteed to win any argument in America today: "That's racist!"

18

Our deteriorating sense of national unity. Specifically the fact that in one part of the country it's called a hero sandwich, in another a hoagie, elsewhere, a grinder, and in others yet, a submarine, poor boy or torpedo. A house divided cannot stand!

19

The heart-wrenching sight of millions of cats and dogs languishing in animal shelters — and still the taboo on eating them in this country continues.

20

The infuriating Chesapeake-Leopard Affair of 1807. Perhaps President Thomas Jefferson said it best when he noted, "Never since the Battle of Lexington have I seen this country in such a state of exasperation." Amen to that!

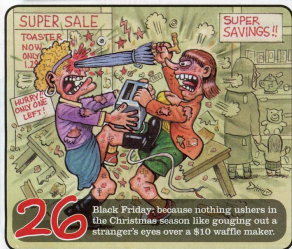

21

President Obama's endless promises that genuine economic recovery "is just around the corner" — just like how, if we just kept watching Lost, it would all make sense in the end.

22 Those brainless stoops at CNN who let Larry King go just as he was hitting his stride.

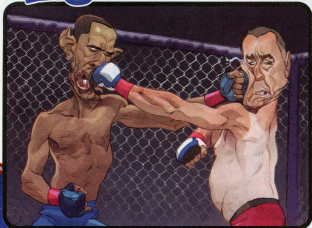

24 Rhode Island: it's always the first piece to go missing in the USA jigsaw puzzle.

26 Black Friday: because nothing ushers in the Christmas season like gouging out a stranger's eyes over a $10 waffle maker.

28 Political leaders who play golf together, when MMA-style cage matches would accomplish a lot more.

raleigh-durham > personals > men seeking women

I LOVE TO BE HUMILIATED

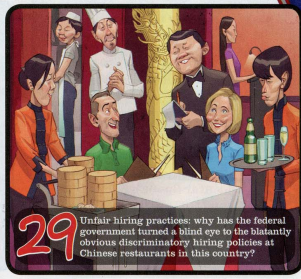

Distinguished gentleman loves musical theatre and wearing a dog collar seeks thin, extremely attractive woman under 30 to listen to Sondheim while making me crawl on all fours and bark.

23 Craigslist, where you can post an ad to unload that dangerously faulty gas grill, find someone who's into the same freaky-deaky sex you are, or just lure random, unsuspecting victims to their death — all for free.

25 That sanctimonious look of self-satisfaction and superiority on the face of the hybrid owner who pulls up next to you at the red light. Thank God he'll be three blocks behind you ten seconds after the light turns green.

27 The New Hampshire state quarter — we just don't like it.

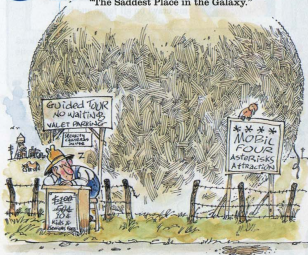

29 Unfair hiring practices: why has the federal government turned a blind eye to the blatantly obvious discriminatory hiring policies at Chinese restaurants in this country?

Midwestern towns' desperate, tourist-luring claims to have things like "The World's Largest Ball of Twine." It might actually draw more visitors to just go ahead and call yourself "The Saddest Place in the Galaxy."

31

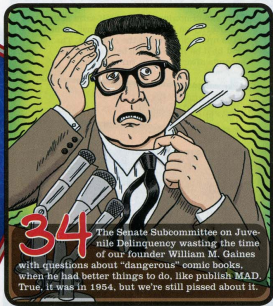

Armchair generals who use the term "we" when advocating sending U.S. troops into war, even though their entire military experience consists of watching reruns of Major Dad.

32

The War on Drugs — so comically counterproductive that it makes our real wars seem legitimate.

33

American-flag patterned lingerie and swimsuits. Is this really what brave men have fought and died for all these years?...Wait, maybe it is.

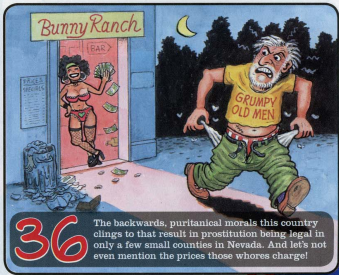

34

The Senate Subcommittee on Juvenile Delinquency wasting the time of our founder William M. Gaines with questions about "dangerous" comic books, when he had better things to do, like publish MAD. True, it was in 1954, but we're still pissed about it.

35

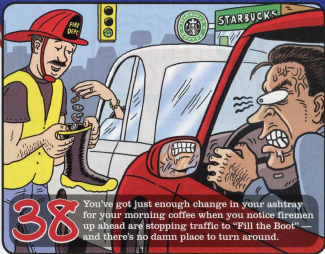

"The Star Spangled Banner" — A tune borrowed from England, with words by a guy in jail, about a battle no one remembers: Hey, let's make that our national anthem!

36

The backwards, puritanical morals this country clings to that result in prostitution being legal in only a few small counties in Nevada. And let's not even mention the prices those whores charge!

37 Traffic cameras that issue violations — leave it to the government to co-opt technology developed for roller coaster photo booths and turn it into something sinister.

38 You've got just enough change in your asstray for your morning coffee when you notice firemen up ahead are stopping traffic to "Fill the Boot" and there's no damn place to turn around.

39 Possums: when they were passing out marsupials, clearly America was at the end of the line.

41 MMA — The perfect sport for Neanderthals who can't watch a boxing match without screaming, "KICK HIM IN THE EYE!!!"

40 The Supreme Court's spotty record on protecting our privacy, while steadfastly assuring theirs by not allowing cameras in the deliberation room.

42 We don't know what's worse — that states need laws to tell people they shouldn't text while driving, or that lawyers are now actively looking for loopholes to those laws.

43 Uncle Sam. Our national symbol is a creepy old guy you'd report in a heartbeat if you saw him hanging around an elementary school.

50 WORST THINGS AMERICA

The fact that child beauty pageants are vilified by people who don't recognize it as an opportunity to make money for college and — godDANGit, Jasminique! You better stop crying this minute and get your booty back in that tanning booth! You've got preschool in ten minutes and we still have to pick up your flipper and see the choreographer! Yes! Fine! You can have a juicebox! Sorry — as we were saying, scholarships.

46

The Alexander Hamilton Service Area on the New Jersey Turnpike: the second stall from the left in the men's room NEVER has any toilet paper. Why...WHY?!?

47

The depressing fact that it's no longer particularly ironic to see an American flag labeled "Made in China."

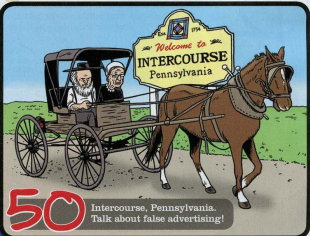

48

A two-party system that ensures that everyone can have their voices heard — from the rich to the cartoonishly super-rich.

49

Missouri's Osage River — which is so ridiculously twisty it makes the Muskegon look like the Ouachita!

Recently, Doonesbury featured a series of strips satirizing the Texas law mandating that women must undergo an invasive medical procedure before terminating a pregnancy. Because of the controversial nature of the strips, many newspapers chose not to run them. As a result, it's a pretty good bet that no other comic strips will be dipping their toe in these waters any time soon. So we'll have to do it for them...

THE COVER: THE MOMENT AFTER

SOBERING FACTS ABOUT THE AMERICAN ECONOMY

In this country, a home gets foreclosed on every 43 seconds. And, due to faulty computer programs in the banking industry, it's often the exact same home.

Federal Reserve head Ben Bernanke actually registered in economics while in junior college, and has no background in economics whatsoever.

Under the tuition payments to NCAA athletes are barely half of what they were at their peak in the early 1980s.

The richest 408 people share nothing at missing 4481.

Despite their staggering difference in yearly salary, Warren Buffett's secretary spends more on hair care products than Buffett himself does.

The American Economy, a garage band from Eugene, Oregon, is still unsigned, and their prospects are getting bleaker by the day.

Americans own more than $180 billion in dollar bills, 98% of which was spent on credit and overpriced textbooks at campus bookstores.

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner's name can be pronounced as "spit 'Nigly into hole'".

Our debt to China is so massively high, leading economists predict we'll eventually just go to war with them and hope for the best.

PLANET TAD!!!!!!

ABOUT ME » NAME: TAD » AGE: 4 » LENGTH OF INTESTINES: 22 FEET (GIVE OR TAKE)

May 4, 2012

Today's lunch in our school cafeteria was all Mexican food. In celebration of Cinco de Mayo, Doug Spivak asked our Spanish teacher, Señora Lutz, what Cinco de Mayo means in Spanish, and she said, "It means May 5th." And he said, "Why would you name a holiday after the day it's on?" And she said, "Why don't you go ask the people who named the Fourth of July?" Good point.

So, this morning at breakfast, my little sister Sophie was looking at the local newspaper when she shrieked. And my mom said, "What is it?" And she said, "They're holding auditions for a TV commercial this weekend! They're looking for adorable blonde 8-year-olds! That's me!" And my mom said, "You're not 8." And my dad said, "You're not blonde." And I said, "You're not adorable." And then my mom and dad gave me a dirty look, and I said, "What? I thought we were taking turns!"

Here's what I can never understand about the Looney Tunes cartoons: Even on their hind legs, rabbits and ducks are no more than one foot tall. And even at their very shortest, humans are usually at least four feet tall. So: Are Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck freakishly huge animals, or is Elmer Fudd super-tiny?

Well, my parents agreed to let my sister audition for that commercial, so she's been practicing her one line — "Mom, I'm hungry!" — nonstop. She's tried it every possible way: "Mom, I'm hungry", and then "Mom, I'm hungry!" and then "Mom, I'm hungry!" And then, weirdest of all, "Mom, I'm hungry!", where she emphasized all three words by shouting them. But they all sounded sort of wooden and fake, like if Nicholas Cage were a seven-year-old girl.

May 12, 2012

Today was Sophie's audition, and my mom dragged me along to it. So I had to spend forever sitting in a room full of little girls, most of them in blonde wigs, all saying, over and over again, "Mom, I'm hungry!" It was actually super-creepy, like a Disney Channel zombie movie.

After an hour of waiting, some lady with a clipboard came out and said Sophie could come in to audition. And then, like, 30 seconds later, Sophie and my mom came out again — Sophie didn't get the part.

As we left the offices, Sophie said, "Mom, I'm hungry!" And I said, "Hey! That sounded pretty convincing!" And she said, "What? I'm not acting. I'm really hungry." In hindsight, I guess, if we'd wanted Sophie to get the part, we should've just starved her for a day.

Well, this is weird: We got a call today from the casting agency where my sister went to audition. They're still not interested in Sophie, but they're looking to cast a kid for some organic grocery-store commercial, and the casting lady remembered me. She said I have the "tude" they're going for. So I'm going to be on Saturday to shoot the commercial. Sophie's refusing to speak to me, which is funny, because I think that she thinks that constitutes a punishment for me.

I'm excited for this new "Battoship" movie. Although the bested game movie I'd be more excited to see would be "Chess," because I'd like to see a scene where a horse that can't move in a straight line demolishes a castle, while a bishop runs away diagonally.

I shot the commercial today. It was weird. I asked if they had a script or anything, and they said I didn't need one — all they wanted me to do was take a bite out of a hamburger. And so I did, over and over and over, as they shot a lot of takes. After around the 15th take, just when I was going to throw up from eating so many bites of hamburger, someone said, "You know, you can spit that out if you want." I kind of wish someone had said that to me sooner.

May 22, 2012

I'm really psyched — my commercial is going to start airing tomorrow. I've told everyone at school. It's a big deal — no one in our class has been on TV since Toby Kim got on the local news for having his foot run over by a lawnmower last summer. Everyone's super-excited about it, except maybe for Toby Kim, who I think is jealous of the attention — after six months of seeming totally fine, he started limping around the hallway again yesterday and claiming that he was having "lawnmower flashbacks."

But mostly, people seem happy for me — Kelli Davis even invited me to sit next to her at lunch today, and asked me all about what it was like to be in a commercial. (I considered telling her about the part where I almost threw up, but decided against it.)

Ugh. My commercial for that grocery store aired tonight. It turns out, the part that I'm in — where I eat the burger — was at the very beginning of the commercial. They showed me eating the hamburger slowed-down and in black-and-white, and a voiceover went, "Do you know what's in your children's food? A lot of stores' meat contains hormones, steroids, and fecal material. That's right: Fecal material." And then the words "Fecal Material!!!!!!" were stamped over my face.

After the commercial, Sophie said, "What's 'fecal material' mean?" And when my mom explained it to her, she rolled all over the floor and said, "Tad! You ate a poopburger! On TV!"

Here's the thing that upsets me most: It's not that I ate a poopburger on TV. It's not even that Kelli Davis will, I'm pretty sure, never invite me to eat at her lunch table again. It's that the casting agency said I had "the look" they were looking for. So apparently, I look like a kid who'd eat a poopburger.
