MAD CELEBRITY SNAPS

Recently, MAD artist Tom Richmond caught up with actor Rich Sommer (who plays Harry Crane on Mad Men) and showed him the spoof of the comic that he illustrated in MAD #508. Obviously, Rich is unhappy. It's not clear if it's because he works on Mad Men, or is just a huge fan of Justin Bieber. Sadly, either way, Tom didn't provide any pictures of the fistcuffs that followed!

ENVELOPE OF THE MONTH

Steve Potter of Cedar Falls, Iowa sent us this envelope, which was inspired by the back cover of a Spy Vs. Spy paperback. Once again, plagiarism pays off!

OF MICE AND MENTAL

I would like you to clear up an issue with my family. While discussing your magazine, we came to the topic of Spy Vs. Spy. My mom forgot what it was, until I told her it was the white mouse and black mouse trying to kill each other. When she understood what I was talking about, she said that they weren't mice, but people. While I disagreed, my sister and dad were on her side. I even showed them a Spy Vs. Spy comic, but they still don't believe that they are mice. Can you please clear up the problem?

Sierra Rush • Grand Blanc, MI

Wait and Sierra — It's hard for us to understand why your family keeps insisting that the Spies aren't mice. As all true fans know, the Black and White Spies are based on a rare species of mouse found in the jungles of Cuba (where "Spy Vs. Spy" creator Antonio Prohías was born). Havana Battlemice (pictured) wear tiny fedoras, craft ingenious traps, and even hold their claws in a "V" formation upon their rival's death. We hope this clears up the problem! Now you can deal with a bigger problem: a family that refuses to believe a single word you say. —Ed.

Okay, there's an old guy, a Latin bombshell wife half his age, two gay dudes with an adopted Asian baby, a frazzled mom, a goofy husband and a bunch of kids. Put them all on a desert island and you've got a very bad sequel to Lost. But put them in Lilly, many more all related and you've got...

muddled family

WRITER: ANNE KOHN
ARTIST: TOM RICHMOND

I'm Jeff! You may recognize me. In 1997 I was inducted into "The Television Sitcom Character Hall of Fame"—The Cranky Wing! I'm back and this time I've added another level to my seltzer-range grumpy: Yes, I switch back and forth from cranky to grumpy! You'll gonna want to DVR that. Last time I had a sitcom series I had a silly wife and a squeal daughter. In this series they've combined them both. I've got a hot, fiery Latina snoop wife half my age. We've got about as much in common as Miley Cyrus and Barack Obama. If I'm lucky, I may live 'til December.

My name was Gloria! I am from Colombia. The country, not the boy league selenity! How you say in America, "Duh." In Colombia I come from a small village which happens to be the murder capital of the country. Now I live in Los Angeles. So I live right at home here. I have this freaky accent. You can't understand half the words I say. But look at me. Does it matter? I could be reading the Congressional Record and you'd still be hearing it!

I'm Phaed! Punch the word "sander" into Google and my picture pops up. I come from a long line of goofy sitcom TV stars trying to be cool. My shame is connected to my kids and I try to atone! I keep on on social media, learn the latest slang and I'm even trying to get ahead! I like to blast the strict dance moves, like The Faded and the Family Chances. People look at me and think, "My hip and happening." Others look at me and think, "Hip surgery is happening!"

I'm Gabe! I'm the most normal, least colorful character in this family. I keep frazzled rehearsal men with those children. I have no glomies and no quarks. I don't have Tina! Hey's well, thirty spunk's charcoal, or Julia Lewis-Dreyfus' edge. The best I can say is that I have Richard Ray's cookbook! On this show we're the traditional people family, which means we're the dullest of the three groups. Without the other two families' banter, this show would be as funny as the Real Bookers!

I'm Twissell and Craig and we're both gay! The similarities end right there. You have two in common: That the old guy and the Latin chick! As a gay couple on a game-time network sitcom, we've broken a lot of ground—we've shown that gay characters can be just as clichéd and poorly-written as heterosexual ones!

I'm Craig! Why am I even on this series? I should be on Ellen, for heaven's sake! I'm Twissell and I have two distinct personalities. Here's the difference: I have one! I'm upright and rigid and I'm a flamboyant fire spirit! I'm Nathan Lane and Rose March rolled into one. So, yeah, I'm a need to have weight! We know it ever since I had to let out the shower curtain!

This is Lilly, our adopted Vietnamese two-year-old. Why did we adopt an Asian child and not a white American baby? Simple: The Asian kid is good for at least nine more episodes' worth of plots. 20 more subplots and at least 412 more one-liners! You do the math. I'm talking to Lilly. She's only two, but that's Asian. You can do the math!

TWISTED TOASTER TALES

Thank you for screwing us.

...By telling the truth about our seasoned beef.

The claims made against Taco Bull are pure baloney, (which ironically contains more meat than our seasoned beef.)

Here's our version of the truth about our seasoned beef.

Our beef is 100% USDA inspected — the same percentage of USDA inspectors that we bribe. Our beef is just like the beef you buy in today's supermarket. You know the kind: the "sell by" date's been changed a dozen times, the green slime's been trimmed off and anything moving has been removed from the packages.

Plain ground beef tastes boring.

The only reason we add anything to our beef is to give the meat flavor...and to mask some unexplained odors. And to make one pound of meat last as long as twenty pounds would.

So here are the REAL percentages. (+ or - 100%)

32% Beef, 22% ground-up photos of beef, 9% stuff that you might have a beef with us calling beef,* 6% human beef (hey, accidents happen at the slaughter house) and 12% Secret Recipe which, if we revealed, you sure as hell wouldn't be talking about the beef any more — believe us!

In case you're curious, here's how we prepare it.

We start with 100% USDA inspected beef. Then our top-rated chefs slow cook it, adding spices and seasonings, stirring constantly until it's perfectly delicious! Then we serve that in our executive dining room. Meanwhile, down in the basement, $5-an-hour workers wearing hats that say "Chef" are working on the brownish specimen we send your way via our Taco Bull stores!

We stand behind our beef — just not downwind of it. We are proud to serve it in all our restaurants. Eating it is another story. The claims about the percentage of meat in our Taco Bull filling and our seasoned beef are 100% false. Well, 20% false + 80% filler.

President and Chief Span Doctor, Taco Bull Corp.

PLANET TAD!!!!!!

ABOUT ME → NAME: TAD → FAVORITE WILSON: OWEN/LUKE/WOODROW (TIE) → AGE: ONE DOZEN-ISH

May 8, 2011

Our family just went out to dinner. I don't think there's a more disgusting name for a food than "baby back ribs."

May 9, 2011

So, today in geometry class, Mr. Schwartz was out sick, and we had a substitute teacher, Mrs. Graham. When she started taking attendance, Chuck and I did what we always do when we get a sub, and traded names. We do this for two reasons:

1. It always cracks us up when substitute teachers call us by the wrong names, and:

2. We figure it's good practice trying to remember not to answer when your own name is called, and to answer to someone else's name instead, in case we ever become undercover agents like James Bond or the guy from Burn Notice.

(I can never remember the guy from Burn Notice's name. I just think of him as being named Burn Notice. As in, "This week, Burn Notice went undercover as an arms dealer.")

As it turned out, Mrs. Graham wound up calling me "Chuck" a lot today, because she didn't know how to work the overhead projector, so I wound up helping her with it. In fact, I felt kind of bad by the end of class, because as I was leaving, she said, "You know, it's hard being a substitute teacher, but everyone at this school seems really nice. Thanks for all your help, Chuck."

May 10, 2011

Bad news. My friend Chuck was out sick today. Which wouldn't be a problem, except that Mr. Schwartz is also out sick, which means that Mrs. Graham was subbing again today. And when she was taking attendance, she said, "I remember you, Chuck," and marked Chuck as being present. And that's when I realized: If I don't say anything when she calls my name, then she'll mark me as being absent, and I'll get a detention for skipping class. But if I tell her that we switched names, then both Chuck and I will get detentions for messing with a sub. So in order to keep Chuck out of detention, I kept pretending to be him today. But he owes me one. I called him to tell him that, but his mom said that he couldn't come to the phone, because he was piking.

May 10, 2011

I feel like, if the only kind of pencil anyone ever uses is the No. 2 pencil, then that pencil should be called the No. 1 pencil.

May 11, 2011

Arrrrrrh. Chuck was out sick again today, and Mr. Schwartz still isn't back, so Mrs. Graham marked me absent from math a second time, even though I was sitting right there. I've now got two days of detention. Plus, it's getting really hard to remember to answer whenever she calls Chuck's name.

I'm thinking that, as funny as it was to hear her call Chuck "Tad" and me "Chuck" a few times on Monday, and as nice as it was to get some spy-practice in, it really wasn't worth it.

May 11, 2011

I've been playing a lot of Angry Birds lately, and here's the thing I don't understand: What's with the slingshot? Can't birds fly?

May 11, 2011

The TV show Bones would be so much cooler if it were about a skeleton who solved crimes.

May 12, 2011

Well, the bad news is, Chuck and Mr. Schwartz are both still sick, so I had to be Chuck in math class again today. And the even worse news is, I fell asleep during class, and then Doug Spivak decided it'd be funny to poke me awake with his protractor. And when I woke up, I kind of screamed out a word that you're never supposed to say in school. And even though I tried to cover for it by saying "szu dogs are really cute" afterward, Mrs. Graham gave me a detention.

But here's the great news: When I looked down at the detention slip, it wasn't my name that was on it. It was Chuck's.

Remember how I said Chuck owes me one? I think he just paid me back.

May 13, 2011

Today was a very, very bad day. Chuck finally made it back to school today — he was still a little feverish, but he said his mom told him he was well enough to go.

In math class, Mrs. Graham was still subbing in geometry, and when she got to Chuck's name, she said, "Here!" And she said, "Very funny, but you're not Chuck." And before I could stop him, he said, "Yes, I am!" And one thing led to another, and pretty quickly, Mrs. Graham figured out the whole name-swapping thing. So we both got double detentions for the next month.

This sort of thing never happens to Burn Notice.

DON MARTIN BEATS THE HIGH COST OF GASOLINE

Let's face it, Dancing with the Stars is hurting real bad for quality contestants. (Kyle Massey, anyone?) If they want to save their sorry show, they should partner with a popular movie franchise — like Star Wars — and get some REAL characters on there! Actually, George Lucas will put the Star Wars name on pretty much ANYTHING, so chances are we'll actually get to see:

dancing with the STAR WARS

From a television studio far, far away, welcome to this season's finale of Dancing With the Star Wars — where the galaxy's greatest heroes and most sinister villains compete in the most dangerous form of battle...dance! Tonight, we announce the ultimate winner, but first, we'll present exactly what all our die-hard viewers are desperate to see — another recap of the season's results!

I don't want to be a continuity nerd, Tom — but I notice that all season long, there have been characters from the original trilogy AND the prequels, all in the same place. How is that possible? A lot of this just isn't making sense!

A valid point, Brooke, but if you think about it, it makes about as much sense as us trying to pass off talent-voids like Joey Lawrence, Mel B., and Steve-O as "stars" in previous seasons!

Too true, Tom. And...the producers are now telling me I should shut up and just look hot for the rest of the show!

Sounds good! But enough original content, let's get to the clips...

WRITER: DAVE CROATTO

ARTIST: HERMANN MEJIA

It's been an exciting season of amazing dancing, complete with unexpected twists, both onstage and OFF! As we saw firsthand, during Darth Vader's backstage flare-up...

Okay, you need to remember that it's a six-count basic, then an eight-count basic into the throwout — not the other way around...URK!

I find your lack of faith in my Lindy Hop disturbing.

However, after 10 weeks of competition and NINE dead partners, Darth Vader was finally sent home.

And there were even MORE unexpected turns! The competition was fierce — and as we all know, the game can change in a moment's notice — as Stormtrooper #156 learned during his and Chelsie Hightower's hip-hop routine...

Stormtroopers aren't known for hitting their targets, but this rendition of the Tootsie Roll is right on the mark!

...And in a surprise maneuver, Wicket advanced past his Stormtrooper competition, and moved ahead to an unexpected lead!

There were moments that were truly inspiring and energizing, such as Jabba the Hutt's amazing lift as he and Lacey Schwimmer danced to "The Time of My Life" from the film Dirty Dancing.

Okay, it's like.....Blaaaah! Okay! It's like — when you're dancing with a partner? Right? You have to CARRY YOUR WEIGHT! You know? And sometimes, to carry your weight? Whooooooaa! Sometimes that means you have to carry your partner's weight. Right? Woo-hoo-woo-oooo!

I can only be honest. The bad news is that Lacey broke every single bone in her body! Until she recovers, she will be just a giant, fleshy blob! The good news, though, is that she is now the PERFECT partner for Jabba! So, silver lining on that one, eh?

In thees dance, I did no like-a the footwork! Maybe because Jabba doesn't have the feet! But thatsa notta an excuse!

Sadly, that would not be the season's only tragedy. Happily, however, there's nothing this show loves more than a disastrous accident that we can revisit over and over again. And again! No one will be able to look back on this season without recalling Darth Maul's heart-breaking elimination during "Swing Night"...

And no one will forget the controversy after Greedo and Han Solo's face-off! After a particularly close competition, the contestants all eagerly waited for the results to be announced...

BLAM!

But the past season has also provided some unforgettable triumphs — like General Grievous' performance on "Broadway Night"...

And, of course, no season would be complete without some special visits from competitors who were eliminated earlier in the season!

And we even had a special guest dance performance from the stars of Tatooine's Best Dance Crew... Jawa-wockeez!

However, as the competition drew to a close, the judges were deadlocked! In the end, they wound up completely ignoring the viewers' votes, and simply fought for their own personal favorite to be the winner!

According to Charlie, what happens to people who take the drug "Charlie Sheen"?

- a) They will die
- b) Their faces will melt off
- c) Their children will weep over their exploded bodies
- d) All of the above

How many of Charlie's teeth are gold, how many are rotten and how many are missing?

- a) 6 gold, 9 rotten and 17 missing
- b) 8 gold, 2 rotten and 22 missing
- c) ½ gold, ½ rotten and 31 missing

According to a recent public opinion poll, what's the most pathetic thing Charlie's done?

- a) Attempted to rent a mansion to house a "porn family"
- b) Boasted publicly about his raging crack habit
- c) Threatened to cut off his ex-wife's head, put it in a box and send it to her mother

Sheen it?

Which "actor" has schtupped more porn stars?

- a) Ron Jeremy
- b) Peter North
- c) Charlie Sheen

Which of the following has Charlie not done?

- a) Demanded a meeting with President Obama to discuss the federal government's "role" in the 9/11 attacks
- b) Shot his fiancée in the arm
- c) Been nominated for an Oscar

According to industry experts, when will Charlie again be given a major role on a network television show?

- a) Never
- b) Never ever
- c) Never ever ever ever ever ever
- d) Any day now. Networks are so desperate for ratings, anything is possible.

When the war in Afghanistan began way back in 2001, there were plenty of hopeful predictions that the thing would be over in a jiffy. Unfortunately, the battle rages on nearly a decade later — and in that time another quagmire has arisen: Broadway's dreadful, eternally-delayed Spider-Man: Turn Off the Dark. And while the two colossal blunders might not seem to invite comparison, there are actually a surprising number of...

Aside from Snooki and Justin Bieber, there are few things in modern life that are as unavoidable as Facebook. Unlike Snooks and Bees, though, Facebook is great for lots of things: connecting with friends, sharing photos, and posting real-time updates on your love of Jujubes.

But these benefits are far outweighed by the many, many things that flat-out suck about the site — beginning with...

THE 50 WORST THINGS ABOUT

facebook

Facebook has 500 million users and is valued at 65 billion dollars — which means that your membership alone has put $130 in the pocket of Mark Zuckerberg's faded, smelly hoodie.

The fact that the first response to just about every new Facebook setting or feature is, "How do I opt out of this?"

Knowing that the 70 people who wrote "Happy Bday!" on your wall didn't actually remember your birthday, but just saw the notification.

Mark
Happy 35th Birthday!

Kim
happy 37th big guy

Zach
The big 3-0!

Josh
Dude I thought you died

The unbelievably clever practice of purposely misspelling your name in your profile to elude college admissions officers and potential employers — go fck yourselves.

The devil and angel that appear on your shoulders as you debate whether to accept or ignore your grandmother's friend request.

When you post a trivial political viewpoint, and someone who disagrees with you replies with a point-by-point manifesto so long it would make the Unabomber drowsy.

Ryan

I just read an article in USA Today that says the deficit actually went DOWN last year.

Michelle

Ok...first off, the article makes an erroneous assumption that the budget was set in the first four months. The historic stimulus bill added 200 billion to the deficit in 2009, and that's just one of the spending items on Obama's shopping list, according to figures from the CBO...

See more. Much, much more

The knowledge that no matter what your privacy settings are, any creep, lunatic or pervert could be looking at your profile picture right now.

8

The growing segment of the population that always talks about Facebook, even when they're NOT logged on to Facebook.

13

Friends who hijack your profile and make subtle, clever changes...like incorporating the word "poop" into your current status.

14

Tagging yourself as your "celebrity doppelganger" — congratulations! You've reaffirmed what everyone on the planet already knew: 1) You're an egomaniac and 2) You don't look an effin' THING like Adrian Grenier.

15

The never-ending, narcissistic quest for the perfect new profile picture.

Facebook chat — It cuts out and logs off at a rate that makes us nostalgic for AOL 2.0.

10

The bland and pointless info section, where your boring answers to insipid categories like "interests" and "activities" make this month's Playmate sound like Shakespeare in comparison.

11

Friends inviting you to view albums of parties you weren't invited to.

12

The charming way your boyfriend changed his status from "in a relationship" to "single" a full three hours before calling to inform you of this development.

16

People who show support for a cause by changing their status update for an hour — after which they can go right back to not really giving a damn.

17

The fact that Facebook's business model is built entirely on sucking away your every last molecule of privacy so they can hawk it to advertisers.

Jacob
RIP Grandma Rose. You will be in my heart always

Brooks Brothers
Jacob! Save 30% on funeral wear at Brooks Brothers!

18

Facebook's penchant for constant profile overhauls and redesigns that improve upon the original almost as much as that time Heinz decided to make blue ketchup.

19

Getting excited about 12 notifications, only to discover that 10 of them contain the word "zombie."

20

Facebook "Friend suggestions" that are as clueless and awful as Amazon's book recommendations.

21

"Liking" — we just don't like it.

22

Companies that beg you to "Friend us on Facebook" — because you've always dreamt of getting hourly updates from Stubbins Pest Control.

23

Your parents on Facebook.

Karen
At dinner with the girls :-)

Karen's Mom
Remember shellfish gives you gas!

24

Pictures that girls take of themselves with the same seductive head tilt that, because of how they have to hold the camera, show mostly armpit.

25

Having your account hacked into so it looks like you're shilling products.

Charlie
I did not send the message "I'm having such great results with Enhanz-Plus All-Natural Male Enhancement Pills," or that they "make my man-quarters feel like a steam locomotive of explosive sex-passion" — my account was hacked into! Please believe me!

Joe
LOL! Awesome, dude — you are the KING! Choo-choo! All aboard!

26

Friend requests from estranged camp bunkmates, third cousins, former landlords, that guy you were in a car accident with and other dregs from your life that you hoped you'd never hear from again.

27

"Never-Ending Quizzes" that are somehow more addictive than meth, yet a hundred times less productive.

28

The Bermuda Triangle-esque vortex of time-wasting, where you sign in just to check your latest updates, and suddenly it's eight hours later and you've seen every picture taken of your friends since they were 12.

29

Pathetically forcing yourself to invite those strange semi-friends from high school back into your life just to buff up your anemic friend count.

30

TMI statuses.

Ben
Status: Stomach bug finally gone! Soooo much diarrhea!

31

People who don't realize just how morbid it is to "Like" a status that begins with "RIP."

Andy
RIP Michael Jackson.

👍 53 People Like This.

Bridget
Nice status!

Jesse
super like. RIP

32

People who have been on Facebook for a solid two years and are STILL using that creepy "silhouette" default profile pic.

33

The depressing realization that, if Bigfoot does exist, he would be on Facebook now, too. But, since he's not, case finally closed.

34

"Zany," warped, Photo Booth profile pictures. Actually, the "twirl" function does make you look a little less cross-eyed.

35

Trying to explain to your mail-order transgender illegal immigrant life partner why your relationship status is "It's complicated" without hurting his/her feelings.

36

Douches who not only regale you with updates of what they've just eaten, but also upload pictures of the meal — as if you otherwise wouldn't believe the existence of a ham and cheddar omelet.

37

Reunions that never would have happened without Facebook's help putting everyone in touch — and that, once you're at them, make you realize why they never should have happened.

38

Tagging all of your friends in those little cartoon spreads with side-splitting aliases like "the drama queen" and "the ladies man," because the only thing better than being friends with you is having your personality reduced to a three-word cliché.

39

People who smugly brag that they're "not on Facebook" — which is just as well, since, beyond that fascinating factoid, they have absolutely NOTHING to share.

40

Back-and-forth Facebook "conversations" that, unlike real conversations, rapidly devolve into lazy, one-word grunts.

Doug
Hey, how'd it go today? I know you were nervous about it.

Trevor
It went great, thanks. It wasn't that bad after all.

Doug
That's good.

Trevor
Yeah.

Doug
ok

41 The sad, inescapable truth that the amount of Facebook "poking" you do is inversely proportionate to the amount you do in real life.

42 Facebook's regular, unannounced altering of privacy settings — which are slightly less difficult to undo than cracking the DaVinci Code.

43 The lack of a "Dislike" feature.

44 When the only people who "Like" your shirtless beefcake pics of yourself are close relatives.

Brad
Spring Break Photos 2011

Brad's Aunt
Very handsome!!!

45 Getting fired because some a-hole took the time to tag you in the far corner of a party photo taking a bong hit.

46 The surprising success of The Social Network — which means it won't be long until we see movies based on the thrilling creation of Google, Mapquest, and GoDaddy.com.

47 The unsettling realization that whenever you try to delete your profile, Facebook goes all HAL on you.

48 Event invitations: Great! Mark your calendars for "I dropped my phone in the toilet and now I need everybody's numbers" and "If enough people join this group I'll shave my eyebrows!"

49 Facebook Mobile — because what's really been missing from the Facebook experience are blurry uploaded cell phone pics and car accidents resulting from you updating your status.

50 The haunting realization that when you get right down to it, Facebook is a thorough, complete and undying record of every stupid thing you've ever done.
